The Daily Courant.

Wedneſday, Auguſt 7. 1706.

From the Paris Letter, dated Auguſt 9.

From the Camp before Turin, July 29.

THE Duke de la Feuillade being return'd from a Journey he made to the Army in Lombardy; has ſent Order to the Marquis de Marignane who is beſieging the Caſtle of Ceva, to return hither with his Troops, Artillery and Ammunition. The Commanding Officer in Mondovi is likewiſe order'd to blow up part of the Fortifications of that Place and return hither; the Duke de la Feuillade deſigning to employ thoſe Troops in more advantagious Enterpriſes.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Auguſt 13.

From the Camp before Turin, Auguſt 1. Our Forces have abandon'd the Siege of Ceva, as alſo the Towns and Caſtles of Mondovi, Saluces, and Savilian; and thoſe Troops returning Yeſterday to Montcallier, 36 Squadrons and 2 Regiments of Foot, commanded by Meſſieurs d'Aubeterre, de Villiers, and de Ruffey, are detach'd towards Stradella, to be at Hand to joyn the Army commanded by the Duke of Orleans. 40 Squadrons and 57 Battallions are ſtill left to carry on this Siege.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated Auguſt 13.

By the Advices from Italy it appears the Beſiegers of Turin advance but ſlowly, becauſe of Sickneſs, Deſertion, Detachments, and the vigorous Reſiſtance of the Beſieged, whoſe Mines and Sallies have coſt the ſaid Beſiegers a great number of Men: Beſides, the Enterprize of the Duke de la Feuillade againſt the Duke of Savoy in the Valley of Lucerne did not ſucceed. His Royal Highneſs has on this Occaſion had a new Proof of the Zeal and Fidelity of the Vaudois, and has given them ſeveral Marks of his Satisfaction with their Services; ſince which he has caus'd the Horſes to be brought down from the Mountains to remount his Cavalry, and is come agen into the Plain, to be ready to make Advantage of all Opportunities, according to the Motions he ſees made by the Enemy, or the Advices he ſhall receive of thoſe of Prince Eugene. We have already ſeen the great Effects of the Paſſage of Part of the Imperial Army over the Adige and the Po, and what an Extent of Country the Enemy have abandon'd at their Approach: Theſe happy Beginnings give us ground to hope, that his Royal Highneſs will at length reap the Fruit of his Firmneſs and almoſt incredible Toils, in ſeeing his Capital City and his Country deliver'd.

The Advices from Verona of the 30th of July, are, that the Troops of Heſſe Caſſel, in Number 10000 Men, are arriv'd in that Province; and that the Hereditary Prince who commands them, and who had made a Tour to Venice, was about to go Poſt to Prince Eugene, whoſe Head-Quarters is at Final de Modena. 'Tis uncertain whether thoſe Troops will forthwith joyn the Army, or act in a ſeparate Body, the better to favour the Deſigns of Prince Eugene.

They write from the Frontiers of Savoy the 4th Inſtant, that a Perſon who left the Camp before Turin the 25th of July, confirm'd that the French loſt above 800 Men in the Sally the Beſieged made the 22d, becauſe a Mine that blew up at the ſame time deſtroy'd ſome of their Officers and a great number of Men. Theſe Letters add, that there were but 3 Batteries of Cannon againſt the Place, and thoſe at too great diſtance to do much Damage: That all was quiet in Turin: And that his Royal Highneſs's Horſe were come down into the Plain.

From the Paris Letter, dated Auguſt 9.

Paris, Auguſt 9. M. Amelot his Majeſty's Ambaſſador in Spain has writ Word, that all the Troops having joyn'd, King Philip would forthwith march in Battallia towards the Enemy; that M. de Legal had the Command of the Right Wing, the Count d'Aguilar of the Left; and that the King of Spain would keep with the Duke of Berwick in the Centre: That the Count de las Torres commands a ſeparate Body, which is to be the Vanguard of the whole Army; and that he has poſted himſelf ſo advantagiouſly between the Portugueſe Army and their Magazines, that 'twas believ'd it would be impoſſible for them to avoid Fighting. The Letters from Verſailles add, that the King of Spain has 47 Battallions and 79 Squadrons, and that the Enemy were much inferior to him. Two Ships of War are ſail'd from Toulon, with Proviſions on board for 600 Men for 16 Days; 'tis thought they are to take in a Battallion at Nice, and carry them to Port Mahon, to ſtrengthen the Garriſon of that Place, which the Enemy have threaten'd a long Time. The 6th at Night the Marſhal de Villeroy arriv'd at Court, and was well receiv'd by the King. The next Day he went to Meudon to the Dauphin's Levee. He has deſir'd his Majeſty to allow him 3 or 4 Days for putting in Order his private Affairs, and then he will attend his Perſon as Captain of the Guards du Corps till his Quarter's waiting expires.

'Tis adviſ'd from the Hague, that at the Marſhal de Villeroy's Reception at Court, the King ſaid to him among other things, 'that they were old 'Friends, and would part no more.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated Auguſt 13.

Verſailles, Auguſt 9. This Morning the King receiv'd Advice by an Expreſs from Spain, that on the 1ſt of this Month the Army of the 2 Crowns and that of the Allies, were within 2 Leagues of each other; and that the King of Spain would endeavour to engage the Allies the next Day, the rather becauſe he had Advice that the Archduke with a conſiderable Body of Forces march'd from Saragoſſa the 23d of July, with Deſign to arrive at Madrid within 7 Days. They write from the Camp before Turin the 1ſt Inſtant, that our Cannon and Mortars had diſmounted moſt of the Artillery of the Citadel, and that our Miners were hard at Work to diſcover the the Enemy's Mines, in order to the storming of the Counterscarp. The Garrison seem determin'd to defend themselves to the last Extremity; and 'tis reported the King said to Day to the Dutchess of Burgundy, that the taking of Turin depended more on the prudent Motions of the Duke of Orleans, than on the Force the Duke de la Feuillade could use. 'Tis talk'd likewise, that Prince Eugene's Army and that of the Duke of Orleans have cannonaded each other 2 Days on the Banks of the Secchia.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated August 13.

Letters from the Grand Army of the Allies of the 10th Instant, tell us, that that Morning at 4 a Clock General Dopf was sent with 400 Horse to view the Passages, towards Herseau and Mouchereau, in order to the concerting of Measures upon his Report for the Army's advancing speedily to meet the Enemy in Case they offer to come by the Plain of Lisle to attempt the Relief of Menin. The 12 Battallions under General Fagel that were order'd on the 9th to post themselves at Lauwe; did upon fresh Orders March the 10th into the Line of Circumvallation before Menin. A Party sent by General Saintt to Comines, surpriz'd and brought off a Guard which the Enemy had posted there. That Day some more Artillery was plac'd on the Batteries.

From the Camp at Helchin, August 12. The Batteries before Menin have already ruin'd the Faces of the 2 Bastions that are attack'd. The Garrison make a great Fire, but from the 8th to the 11th had we but 8 Men kill'd and a few wounded. The Duke of Marlborough is gone to the Camp before Menin, to shew the Batteries and Approaches to the Prince Royal of Prussia, who is upon his Departure for Holland. To morrow the Army is to make a Motion nearer Menin, to be in a Readyness to march on the other side the Lys, to fight the French if they make any Motion to relieve Menin.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated August 13.

Letters from Bourdeaux of the 31st of July import, that an Embargo was laid upon all the Merchant Ships in that Harbour, till it should appear where the Enemy's Fleet design'd to make their Descent; and that the Inhabitants of lower Guienne had receiv'd Order to take Arms and March to the Side of the Garone and the Sea Coasts, where Intrenchments were making for the better Opposing the Descent which 'twas apprehended the Allies would attempt to make there.

Portsmouth, August 5. Yesterday Sir Cloudsly Shovel, with the Fleet under his Command, sail'd from St. Helens, with the Wind at E. N. E. about an Hour after the Wind coming up at South oblig'd him to Anchor about 5 Leagues off: But the Wind being now at N. W. he is going to Sail again. 'Tis said the Dutch Transports are in the Offing; but we cannot see them.
